WHAT IS CLAIMED IS:

1. A method of preventing air embolisms, comprising the steps of:

(a) providing a fluid source in communication with an aperture extending into an anatomical cavity; and

(b) delivering fluid from said fluid source into said anatomical cavity when a condition of negative pressure exists in said anatomical cavity.